

Lansburgh & Bro.

Card and wedding invitations engraved in the latest form. Send or call and get samples and prices. Workmanship guaranteed the best. Prices the lowest.

The Great Sacrifice of Veilings

is still on. And the crowds that have continually crowded our center aisle for the past two days have been wonderful. We have sold thousands of yards, and the complete assortment is still intact. Do not delay. Come tomorrow. We have divided them into two lots—as follows:

LOT 1—A complete assortment of the latest novelties in Veilings, consisting of the magpie-jackdaw, chenille dots and plain meshes—in fact, Veilings of all kinds imaginable, in all shades, single width. Every piece in the lot will worth 25c. a yard. You can buy as much as you desire tomorrow at—yard.....

5c.

LOT 2—Stylish effects in all the newest Veilings, in plain and fancy meshes, with large and small dots, in all colors, double width, not a piece in the lot worth less than 30c. a yard and the majority worth 45c. You can make your selection at—yard.....

10c.

These Veilings will be displayed in our center aisle bargain tables.

Fall and Winter Styles. Ladies' Jackets, Dress Suits and Long Rain Coats

are now ready for your inspection. The ladies of Washington, who have in the past purchased our goods, need not be told of their merits; they know of our past successes and of our constant aim to improve every feature. Ladies who have not, will find pleasure and profit in dealing with a house that makes no false promises; that never misrepresents its goods, selling at prices the lowest consistent with reliability. The motto of our house has and always will be

"Honest Dealing Makes Permanent Success." and experience has shown that our customers appreciate this method of doing business.

Long Rain Coats, made of best quality covert cloth, strictly man tailored, sizes 32 to 42, in Oxford gray and tan, lap seams, velvet collar, fly front, turn-over cuffs, satin lined to waist.
$17.50 value for $13.98.

Black Eton Walking Suits of good quality, heavy-weight cheviot, velvet collar, lap seams, double-breasted Eton effect, beautifully stitched skirts and jackets.
$17.50 value for $13.98.

Walking Skirts for ladies, of heavy-weight cloth, in black only, lengths 38 to 42, lap seams, beautifully stitched, flare flounce.
$6.98 value for $4.98.

New Fall Styles Silk and Flannel Waists.

Flannel Waists, in plain black, navy, garnet, violet and old rose, beautifully tailored, with stitched straps, and cuffs trimmed with small silver buttons; also another style with cluster of tucks to form yoke effect and four clusters of tucks down back.
$2.50 value for $1.98.

Striped Tricot Waists, all new fall shades.
$2.50 value for $1.98.

Black Taffeta Waists with clusters of tucks and hemstitching front and back, also on sleeves.
$5.00 value for $3.98.

Ask to see our new styles of French Flannel Waists, copies of imported—they are actually worth $5.00—for a few days we've marked them.

We are showing a large assortment in Ladies' Tea Gowns and Wrappers.

Lansburgh & Bro.,
420 to 426 Seventh Street.

R & G CORSETS NEVER STRETCH

No woman need be without an R & G Corset because 12,000 dealers now sell them. If your dealer is not one of the 12,000, send to us. We will send your name to the nearest dealer who handles this corset. Every dealer who sells the R & G Corset sells it with the broadest guarantee ever made for any corset.

R & G CORSET COMPANY, New York

Coal, $5 Per Ton.
New River Red Ash Egg Coal, $5 Per Ton.

WM. J. ZEH,
6th & K sts. n.w. 702 11th st. n.w.
13th and D sts. s.w.

—The best bread for children—the best bread for adults—is our delicious and nutritious

Milk Bread.
—Made and baked by experts in a model home bakery—5c. loaf. Delivered fresh daily.
Holmes' Bakery, 1st & E Sts.
Phone 1564.

Begin Your Art Work Properly Equipped

STUDENTS taking up Drawing or Painting in the various art classes throughout the city should select their supply of Pencils, Erasers, Instruments, Brushes, Drawing Boards, Easels, Crayons, etc., from this stock. The best of everything required in art work at equitable prices.

Geo. F. Muth & Co.,
Formerly "The Art Store"
418 7th Street.

Public Coal Dump.
FURNACE, $4.00. EGG, $5.20. NUT, $6.00.
STOVE, $3.00. CEMENTER, $2.00.
TO CONSUMERS.
2D ST. AND FLORIDA AVE. N.E.
tel. 261-10. TELEPHONE 328.

REGRET IN LONDON

Death of the President the Cause of Genuine Sorrow.

COURT ORDERED INTO MOURNING

Sermons and Special Services at Many Churches.

LONDON NEWS AND GOSSIP

Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

LONDON, September 18, 1901.

The death of Mr. McKinley, which became generally known early on Saturday morning, has excited more profound emotion than any event of the kind that I remember since the death of the queen. It was the one subject of men's thoughts and speech, and it is a proof of the growing solidarity of the world, and especially of the English-speaking races, that the event should have excited such deep and universal sympathy. The loss of the most conspicuous public man in this country would not produce an expression of feeling so strong and so widespread. No doubt this is largely due to the tragic circumstances of Mr. McKinley's death, but, making allowance for that, it is a remarkable proof of the growing kinship of nations.

There was not a supple in a pulpit in London in which, on Sunday the death of the President was not referred to in sympathetic tones. There is no doubt that on the day of his funeral there will be what may be called a national manifestation of sorrow. There is to be a memorial service at St. Paul's Cathedral and also at Westminster Abbey. The stock exchange in London will be closed, and if business be not entirely suspended there will be sufficient evidence to mark the day as one of national mourning. The king has ordered the court to go into mourning for a week. The assassination of Mr. Lincoln was in some respects more mournful and terrible than that of Mr. McKinley, but those who remember it say it did not excite anything like so much emotion in this country.

His Death a National Loss.

The death of President McKinley has clearly been recognized by the English people as a national loss, and such services in his memory at St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey will in every sense be fitting. These edifices, national in their character, belong by tradition at any rate, to all the English-speaking races equally with Britons, and especially so to Americans, who have in both places contributed most generously to the records therein contained. These services will be held on Thursday. The lord mayor of London and members of the corporation will join in the service at St. Paul's, and members of the cabinet and the corps diplomatique and officials of the United States embassy are expected to be present. The ceremony will in every sense be in keeping with the occasion, and a historic gathering, and in its details, it is true, but forging another strong link between England and America, will be the outcome. The sorrow that has been equally interesting, and invitations are to be sent to representative men and to prominent Americans resident in London, and it will also be attended by a section of the American embassy.

The flags are flying at half-mast. The newspapers appear with black borders. On all sides there are tokens of national mourning, which is manifestly heartfelt. On the morning of the President's death I had occasion to go to the city, and I had a chance to see the coast, and all through Surrey and Sussex signs of mourning were evident—flags were flying at half-mast on ships, hotels, and in many instances, private houses. All along the coast at intervals of a few hundred yards are what are known as martello towers, small, round towers erected during the Napoleonic wars of a hundred years ago. Every one that I saw had a union jack at half-mast, and the coastguard stations likewise. At the Earl of de la Warr has built a Kur-saal in imitation of foreign watering places—this had a British white ensign at half-mast on its flag pole, and the stars and stripes raised over it. Everywhere was the most touching evidence of profound sympathy with Americans in their sorrow. And so it is all over the country.

Mourning for Garfield.

When President Garfield died Queen Victoria commanded the court to go into mourning for a week. This was the first time that the English court had taken official recognition of the death of an American President. The precedent thus established marked a great stage in bringing the two nations closer together. And, in spite of the fact that the English court is still in mourning, King Edward has followed the precedent set by his mother. He has all along shown the keenest anxiety about the condition of the President; has been both officially and unofficially kept informed of his condition.

Although the cabinet is not sitting, and partly, in Mr. Rudyard Kipling's phrase, cannot be regarded as a "ministry in being," yet the question of the Duke of York attending the Washington obsequies has reached something like cabinet gravity. It has been the subject of private conversations between the king and Lord Salisbury and between the premier and several of his colleagues, notably, as we may believe, Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Lansdowne. Cipher exchanges between widely-separated ministers are carried on through a confidential channel in Downing street, and a manifest flutter there clearly indicates the presence and the pressure of matters of extreme importance.

The king, it is whispered, strongly favors the Duke of York's presence at Mr. McKinley's funeral as chief mourner from the parent empire. The average soldier, who does not perhaps regard things of taste in the same spirit as Hatfield and Birmingham regard them, takes his stand on a less unselfish pedestal and speaks of the presence of his royal highness as "good business." It is, indeed, whispered in official court circles that the Duke of York, with the tact to be expected from the son of his father, has called home for instructions. Apparently he himself had been struck by a sense of courtly duty, and to the great stricken nation I hardly think it likely, however, that matters can be arranged for the duke to go, much as he and the king approve the step.

Paper on Anarchism.

The archdeacon of Westminster contributes a thoughtful paper to the absorbing question of "Anarchism: Its Causes and Cure." Anarchy, he says, is not to be exterminated by wreaking vengeance on individuals, though a murderous ruffian like Czolgosz is better off of the world. But if you execute every known anarchist in the world you have not really touched the evil. Anarchism is the fruitage of atheism, and the archdeacon quotes from the speech of a noted anarchist the phrase, "The first lie is God, the second lie is the idea of right." The archdeacon himself considers the cause of anarchism to be two-fold. First, the inadequacy of the conventional conception of the ruler of the Universe, and, secondly, the instability of the equilibrium of the whole commercial system of civilized nations. In the "Christianizing of commerce" he sees hope of better times, when there will be an end of anarchism.

The order for court mourning has once again plunged the West End into mourning. Queen Victoria, then the Empress of India, and now President McKinley. Who is it to be next? But the West End tradesmen are not to be deterred. They are dressed in funeral trappings. Many of the shops, besides displaying only mourning goods, exhibited the American flag draped in crepe, and each had a black shroud up. Regent street is the favorite thoroughfare of the Americans in London, and this knowledge may possibly have something to do with the promptitude and unanimity with which the Regent street tradesmen gave their establishments such a doleful aspect. But it was evidently in consonance with the feelings not only of the American visitors to London, but of the Londoners as well. Probably the native women of England were not American women black, but the latter were supplementing their outfits as rapidly as possible.

Royal Servants Displaced.

Considerable discontent, I am told, is being caused among the servants of the

L. STEIN, 416 9th Street.

L. STEIN, 416 9th Street.

THE OPENING OF STEIN'S NEW FURNITURE STORE.

In making our bow to the people of Washington in our new role as Furniture dealers we earnestly seek a continuance of the liberal patronage we have enjoyed in our Frame-making and Picture business. We open this new store fully equipped to cater to your every homefurnishing need. In selecting our stock of Furniture we picked only such reliable makes as have beauty and serviceability to recommend them. In CARPETS, MATTINGS, OIL CLOTH and other floor coverings we show the dependable makes in a splendid line of new and beautiful patterns.

In celebration of our opening all goods are marked at special SOUVENIR PRICES—prices that mark the dawn of a new era in furniture selling in this city.

The specials mentioned below are in the nature of an index to hundreds of good things throughout the store.

China Closets.

Quartered Oak China Closets, highly polished, best ends. Worth $20. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $14.50

Extra Quartered Oak China Closets, with mirror top; splendid construction and elegant finish. Worth $30. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $19.50

Odd Dressers.

Golden Oak Dresser, with French mirror; large and commodious; regularly $10. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $6.75

Quartered Oak Dresser, with oval French plate mirror; regular $10. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $6.75

50 Tabourettes, at 9c.

35c. Tabourettes, 9c.

A substantial souvenir of our opening. On sale Tuesday 10 a.m. In solid oak, well made and well finished—can't be matched under 35c. at least.

Combination Cases.

Golden Oak or Mahogany-finish Combination Case, very elaborate and nicely finished. French style. Worth $15. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $14.75

Extra Quartered Oak Combination Case, with large mirror. Perfect in every detail. Worth $25. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $17.50

Ladies' Desks.

Elegant line of Ladies' Desks. Beautiful and dainty designs in Oak or Mahogany-finish. Regularly sold for $5.00. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $3.98

Rockers.

Beautiful Golden Oak or Mahogany-finish Rocker; regularly sold for $3. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $1.95

L. STEIN, 416 9th Street.

Book Shelf.

Beautiful Golden Oak Book Shelf—large, roomy, shelves; regularly retails for $3. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $1.75

Morris Chairs.

Golden Oak or Mahogany-finish Morris Chair, with beautiful reversible velvet cushions; regularly worth $6. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $4.25

Extra Heavy Golden Oak Morris Chair, with handsome velvet cushion; regularly sells for $10. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $7.50

3-piece Parlor Suite, like illustration; mahogany-finish frame; well made; good damask covering; worth $15. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $10.50

3-piece Parlor Suite, mahogany-finish frame; very handsome and substantial; covered in best silk damask; worth $20. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $19.50

3-piece Parlor Suite, large pieces; elegantly made and finished; covered in silk damask; worth $40. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $29.50

3-piece Parlor Suite, richly carved frame; handsomely polished; best upholstery with spring seats; worth $50. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $37.50

Couches.

Large, handsome Couch, with fine oak frame. Covered in good velvet; regularly worth $5.50. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $3.98

Bed Couches and Lounges of every kind, in beautiful designs. Handsome Bed Lounge, with well-detailed oak frame and good solid bed covered with fine velvet. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $9.75

Corner Chairs.

Beautiful Corner Chair, upholstered in silk damask. Fine polish finish; regularly worth $10. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $7.50

Durable White Enamelled Iron Bed; like illustration, with brass trimmings; elegant worth $4.50. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $2.75

Handsome White Enamelled Bed, with brass mountings, heavy posts; regularly worth $7. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $4.75

Fine All-brass Bed, the best make; heavy posts; elaborately designed; regularly worth $30. Stein's Souvenir Price..... $19.50

McKnew's. SUPERB CREATIONS

In High-class Tailored Suits, Coats, Waists and Skirts for Fall and Winter 1901-02.

STYLISH SUITS.

Black and Blue Cheviot and Venetian Suits—with blouse—double-breasted—$20

Elegant Blue Cheviot Costume, with double-breasted jacket and double-bar circular blouse—$23.50

Beautiful Blue and Gray Homespun Suits—House jacket, with velvet vest and collar—satin trimmed—$25

Handsome Louis XIV Suit of Black Cheviot—silk lined—$27.50

Louis XIV Suits—in fine new weave of cheviot—drop skirt—silk lined—$36.50

And scores of other well styles in Fall and Winter Tailored Suits.

Natty Flannel Waists

—In black, garnet, old rose, light and dark blue, gray and tan—open back and front—$2.25, $2.75, $3, $3.88, $4.25 and $5.50.

Charming Silk Waists

—In the new open-back or open-front styles—In black, reseda, royal, navy, rose, garnet, gray and cream—$5, $5.50, $6.50, $7, $7.50, $8, $8.50 to $25.

Separate Skirts

—In all the swell new fabrics and silk novelty effects—at $5, $5.50, $6.50, $7.50, $8.75, $9, $10, $11.50, $12.50, up to $30.

WM. H. MCKNEW, 933 PENNA. AVE.

royal household by the somewhat drastic changes which the king had introduced with a view to economy. It is impossible, however, for sovereigns or anybody else to economize without giving offense to somebody. The prime minister, the duke and the exchequer might take a leaf out of the king's book and effect considerable economy by getting rid of a number of sinecure offices. The Scotch duke could very well dispense with. It has been estimated that nearly a million pounds a year could be saved to the national treasury by abolishing those offices now held by persons whose sole duty it is to draw their salaries. At any rate, it might be arranged that the offices should cease on the death of the present holders. There are precedents for the adoption of such a policy. The editorship of the London Gazette, an appointment worth £500 a year, was abolished on the death of the last editor, who, it is said, never saw the inside of the office.

Changes are about to be made in regard to the king's Scotch estates, which will materially lessen the annual expenditure upon them. The late queen was very fond of her Scotch home and surrounded herself with a large staff of attendants. Some of these will be no longer maintained. Lord Macquhar and Sir Dugald Blyth have, I understand, drawn up a scheme for the administration of the Balmoral estate, which will have his majesty's attention during his stay there, but it may be taken for granted that there will be the same consideration

SMART COATS.

The new 26-in. Jacket—half-fitting back—in black, castor and tan—the swell shades for fall and winter wear—special values at $9, $10, $12.50 and $14.50.

The new three-quarter length Automobiles, in tan, black and castor—$15.50

The New Raglans and Newmarkets—in those swell castor and light—$13.50

Misses' and Children's Automobiles—short and long—all sizes, from 4 to 15—the handsomest little jackets ever tailored for the ready-made trade—$5 as low as

The Walking Skirts

—hardly need mention, for they are going as rapidly as we can unpack them from the cases. Ladies who have compared our values with those offered elsewhere say we have the handsomest styles in the city at the prices—which range from $5 up.

The Walking Suits

—are tailored just as handsomely and hang as gracefully and becomingly as the finest tailor-made street costumes. The swing and set of the skirts and jackets cannot be duplicated by any dressmaker. Price range $18.50 from.....

WM. H. MCKNEW, 933 PENNA. AVE.

royal household by the somewhat drastic changes which the king had introduced with a view to economy. It is impossible, however, for sovereigns or anybody else to economize without giving offense to somebody. The prime minister, the duke and the exchequer might take a leaf out of the king's book and effect considerable economy by getting rid of a number of sinecure offices. The Scotch duke could very well dispense with. It has been estimated that nearly a million pounds a year could be saved to the national treasury by abolishing those offices now held by persons whose sole duty it is to draw their salaries. At any rate, it might be arranged that the offices should cease on the death of the present holders. There are precedents for the adoption of such a policy. The editorship of the London Gazette, an appointment worth £500 a year, was abolished on the death of the last editor, who, it is said, never saw the inside of the office.

Changes are about to be made in regard to the king's Scotch estates, which will materially lessen the annual expenditure upon them. The late queen was very fond of her Scotch home and surrounded herself with a large staff of attendants. Some of these will be no longer maintained. Lord Macquhar and Sir Dugald Blyth have, I understand, drawn up a scheme for the administration of the Balmoral estate, which will have his majesty's attention during his stay there, but it may be taken for granted that there will be the same consideration royal household by the somewhat drastic changes which the king had introduced with a view to economy. It is impossible, however, for sovereigns or anybody else to economize without giving offense to somebody. The prime minister, the duke and the exchequer might take a leaf out of the king's book and effect considerable economy by getting rid of a number of sinecure offices. The Scotch duke could very well dispense with. It has been estimated that nearly a million pounds a year could be saved to the national treasury by abolishing those offices now held by persons whose sole duty it is to draw their salaries. At any rate, it might be arranged that the offices should cease on the death of the present holders. There are precedents for the adoption of such a policy. The editorship of the London Gazette, an appointment worth £500 a year, was abolished on the death of the last editor, who, it is said, never saw the inside of the office.

WM. H. MCKNEW, 933 PENNA. AVE.

Changes are about to be made in regard to the king's Scotch estates, which will materially lessen the annual expenditure upon them. The late queen was very fond of her Scotch home and surrounded herself with a large staff of attendants. Some of these will be no longer maintained. Lord Macquhar and Sir Dugald Blyth have, I understand, drawn up a scheme for the administration of the Balmoral estate, which will have his majesty's attention during his stay there, but it may be taken for granted that there will be the same consideration royal household by the somewhat drastic changes which the king had introduced with a view to economy. It is impossible, however, for sovereigns or anybody else to economize without giving offense to somebody. The prime minister, the duke and the exchequer might take a leaf out of the king's book and effect considerable economy by getting rid of a number of sinecure offices. The Scotch duke could very well dispense with. It has been estimated that nearly a million pounds a year could be saved to the national treasury by abolishing those offices now held by persons whose sole duty it is to draw their salaries. At any rate, it might be arranged that the offices should cease on the death of the present holders. There are precedents for the adoption of such a policy. The editorship of the London Gazette, an appointment worth £500 a year, was abolished on the death of the last editor, who, it is said, never saw the inside of the office.

WM. H. MCKNEW, 933 PENNA. AVE.

Changes are about to be made in regard to the king's Scotch estates, which will materially lessen the annual expenditure upon them. The late queen was very fond of her Scotch home and surrounded herself with a large staff of attendants. Some of these will be no longer maintained. Lord Macquhar and Sir Dugald Blyth have, I understand, drawn up a scheme for the administration of the Balmoral estate, which will have his majesty's attention during his stay there, but it may be taken for granted that there will be the same consideration royal household by the somewhat drastic changes which the king had introduced with a view to economy. It is impossible, however, for sovereigns or anybody else to economize without giving offense to somebody. The prime minister, the duke and the exchequer might take a leaf out of the king's book and effect considerable economy by getting rid of a number of sinecure offices. The Scotch duke could very well dispense with. It has been estimated that nearly a million pounds a year could be saved to the national treasury by abolishing those offices now held by persons whose sole duty it is to draw their salaries. At any rate, it might be arranged that the offices should cease on the death of the present holders. There are precedents for the adoption of such a policy. The editorship of the London Gazette, an appointment worth £500 a year, was abolished on the death of the last editor, who, it is said, never saw the inside of the office.

WM. H. MCKNEW, 933 PENNA. AVE.

Changes are about to be made in regard to the king's Scotch estates, which will materially lessen the annual expenditure upon them. The late queen was very fond of her Scotch home and surrounded herself with a large staff of attendants. Some of these will be no longer maintained. Lord Macquhar and Sir Dugald Blyth have, I understand, drawn up a scheme for the administration of the Balmoral estate, which will have his majesty's attention during his stay there, but it may be taken for granted that there will be the same consideration royal household by the somewhat drastic changes which the king had introduced with a view to economy. It is impossible, however, for sovereigns or anybody else to economize without giving offense to somebody. The prime minister, the duke and the exchequer might take a leaf out of the king's book and effect considerable economy by getting rid of a number of sinecure offices. The Scotch duke could very well dispense with. It has been estimated that nearly a million pounds a year could be saved to the national treasury by abolishing those offices now held by persons whose sole duty it is to draw their salaries. At any rate, it might be arranged that the offices should cease on the death of the present holders. There are precedents for the adoption of such a policy. The editorship of the London Gazette, an appointment worth £500 a year, was abolished on the death of the last editor, who, it is said, never saw the inside of the office.

WM. H. MCKNEW, 933 PENNA. AVE.

Changes are about to be made in regard to the king's Scotch estates, which will materially lessen the annual expenditure upon them. The late queen was very fond of her Scotch home and surrounded herself with a large staff of attendants. Some of these will be no longer maintained. Lord Macquhar and Sir Dugald Blyth have, I understand, drawn up a scheme for the administration of the Balmoral estate, which will have his majesty's attention during his stay there, but it may be taken for granted that there will be the same consideration royal household by the somewhat drastic changes which the king had introduced with a view to economy. It is impossible, however, for sovereigns or anybody else to economize without giving offense to somebody. The prime minister, the duke and the exchequer might take a leaf out of the king's book and effect considerable economy by getting rid of a number of sinecure offices. The Scotch duke could very well dispense with. It has been estimated that nearly a million pounds a year could be saved to the national treasury by abolishing those offices now held by persons whose sole duty it is to draw their salaries. At any rate, it might be arranged that the offices should cease on the death of the present holders. There are precedents for the adoption of such a policy. The editorship of the London Gazette, an appointment worth £500 a year, was abolished on the death of the last editor, who, it is said, never saw the inside of the office.

WM. H. MCKNEW, 933 PENNA. AVE.

Changes are about to be made in regard to the king's Scotch estates, which will materially lessen the annual expenditure upon them. The late queen was very fond of her Scotch home and surrounded herself with a large staff of attendants. Some of these will be no longer maintained. Lord Macquhar and Sir Dugald Blyth have, I understand, drawn up a scheme for the administration of the Balmoral estate, which will have his majesty's attention during his stay there, but it may be taken for granted that there will be the same consideration

Sacrifice Piano Bargains.

We have never offered finer pianos and at such remarkably low prices as the following list shows:

A snap bargain in a beautiful, nearly new Upright that cost $500; only used six months—

$325.

Easy terms—$25 cash, $10 per mo.

Magnificent Mahogany Upright; a beauty in style, elegance of finish and richly toned. A regular $450 instrument, for only—

$185 Cash.

Handsome Full Size Upright Grand Piano; one of our best and most durable; only used six months by careful musician. Regular $375 style. Quick sale, only—